CORDINGLY REGAINS LAND COURT RULES

Williams' Claim to Cottage
Found to Have Been a Forgery

After a protracted legal battle, extending from November 1929, George V. Cordingly is to again be in sole possession of the disputed property at Bellmore Park, Lake Villa. The sheriff was ordered by a court order signed by Judge Edward D. Shurtliff, Saturday to dispossess Williams and Charles Pester, who has been working in Williams' interests, from the land and cottage.

When no answer had been filed to Cordingly's claim, Okef Fuqua, Master-in-Chancery, recommended that the property be returned to Cordingly, but last month Mrs. Williams appeared in court, and claimed that the deed recorded in Williams' name until he demanded back possession of the cottage in November.

Cordingly claims that he had simply given the Williams family free rent in the cottage for charitable reasons, and was unaware of the deed recorded in Williams' name until he demanded back possession of the cottage in November.

Miss Esther Stearns and D. J. Drom motored to Streator, Ill., Saturday, returning the following day, accompanied by Mrs. A. Stearns and Miss Loretta Stearns, who will visit the Jas. Stearns home for a couple of weeks.

YOUTH DROWNS IN VOLTZ LAKE AFTER FAINTING SPELL

Chicago Florist Loses Life
After Being Under Water
Twelve Minutes

Herman W. Klemme, Jr., 20, of Brookfield, Ill., was drowned Tuesday morning in Voltz lake, two miles north of Antioch, just off Highway 83, after falling backward out of a rowboat into ten feet of water, as the result of a fainting spell.

The body was recovered 12 minutes later. Artificial respiration was applied for over an hour by Dr. H. F. Beebe and Dr. W. W. Warriner, but to no avail.

Father Witnesses Fall
Young Klemme had been staying at Voltz lake since June 16, in an effort to recover from numerous fainting spells which hindered him in his work.

He had risen as usual Tuesday, eaten his breakfast, and gone down to the pier, which is about 30 feet from the cottage.

Stepping into a rowboat which was tied to the pier, young Klemme sat down. He had been sitting there alone for some time when his father walked out on the porch of the cottage. Just as he happened to glance at the boat, he saw his son topple over backwards into the water. He ran to the scene but the youth had sunk in the 10 feet depth, and the father was unable to swim.

The body was brought to the surface within a few minutes by the aid of draghooks. A call was brought in to the Antioch Volunteer Fire Department, believing that the boy could be saved by a pulmotor, but all efforts failed.

Klemme was a successful florist from Chicago, having spent much time during the last few years with the leading floral companies. He was said to be well acquainted with the details of his business, and to be making unusual progress.

As his fainting spells were proving to be such a handicap in his business, he decided to come to Voltz lake with his family for the summer, in an attempt to recover. His condition had been improving.

Call Coroner
His mother and father and two sisters and two brothers, June, Vera, Earl and Lemuel, survive him.

He was born in Chicago on Nov. 8, 1909, and had spent nearly all of his life in and about Chicago.

Coroner A. B. Schmitz went to the scene immediately after the call of the drowning had reached the office of the sheriff. He was accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Milton La Violette.

PARKS TO FACE TRIAL AS RESULT OF INVESTIGATION INTO PRZYBOSKI TRAGEDY

The preliminary trial of Robert E. Parks, manager of the Des Plaines emergency hospital, who was arrested Saturday on a charge of violating the state medical practice laws, will be held Friday, August 22, at La Grange Park. Parks has been released on a $200 bond.

The deaths of Mrs. Max Przyborski and Murray McLeod, who were hurt in an automobile accident two weeks ago, and of the previous death of "Paddy" Harmon, sports promoter, occasioned investigation into the matter, resulting in the arrest of Parks, who, it was found, had not been practicing in accordance with the state medical laws. Nevertheless, he had been charging exorbitant prices for the care of his patients, a bill of $618 being paid by William Dalziel, who handled the business case for Mr. Przyborski, after the tragic accident.

AUSTIN FORTRESS PRESENTS FLAGS TO ALLENDALE BOYS

CIVIL WAR VETS OF COUNTY TO HOLD ANNUAL REUNION

Thinning Ranks of Those Who Wore the Blue to Meet 52nd Time

The 52nd annual reunion of Lake county soldiers and sailors, who fought in the civil war is being held today at Memorial Hall, Waukegan.

Books were opened for registration this morning at 9 o'clock, and the business session followed at 9:30. Following a dinner served by the Woman's Relief Corps of Waukegan, the memorial service was held at two o'clock.

Addison J. Felter, Antioch township's sole surviving veteran, is in attendance.

A. T. White, is president, and S. F. Greenleaf, secretary and treasurer of the county organization.

Old Eagle Eye Says--

Marshal Brogan doesn't intend to give any careless parker the opportunity to say that they couldn't see the white parking lines, when he ambles up to the unfortunate devil and smilingly inquires what this big idea is. No, he believes in being prepared, which really isn't such a bad slogan, especially when one considers how many folks don't bother to have any at all. Honestly the lines do look fine, after being repainted this week; just dandy.

We had just about concluded on that subject when we overheard a passer-by remark, "Let's paint the whole town white, and make the drives with black lines." Now what sense do you suppose he thought there was in that? Maybe he considered that this, by right, should have been the Great White City.

That's an idea now! If the elders of the town held a council meeting, can you imagine that they might evolve some inspired plan to make Antioch white and keep it white? But where would all the paint come from? Why of course! We'll build a paint factory and thus give employment to the unemployed. Seems likely that considerable time and labor might be spent even in the painting of the city. We have reached a conclusion: That passerby not only had an eye for shining purity, but had the best interests of the country at heart, and was doing his humble bit to lighten President Hoover's burden.

What's your speed? Do you believe in high-test or low-test? Now's the time to find out, if you've never thought about it before. Beware of the ladies. So far, a representative of the gentler sex has the "rep" for going farther than any one else in this Chevy contest. Bet we know why! A woman has practiced the art of coaxing stubborn mules for so long that a modern well-behaved Chevrolet capitulates without a struggle when she whispers softly, "On, on, and ever onward."

Evidently there are a few men, also, who have learned the gentle art of pacifying, judging by a later announcement which puts F. Powles in the lead, having gone 140 of a mile farther than his fair competitor.

Mr. Van Duzer was called suddenly to Churdan, Iowa, Tuesday, by the illness of his sister, Mrs. Alice Robbins. Mrs. Robbins is ninety years old.

CHEVROLET GAS DERBY CONTINUES

153 Drivers Test Their Skill
Squeezing Mileage From One Pint Gas

WHITMORE TO GIVE PARTY TUESDAY NIGHT

Widespread interest is being shown in the Drivers' Economy Contest which is being conducted this week by the Whitmore Chevrolet Co., of Antioch, for which cash prizes are being offered the three persons driving the "greatest distance" on a pint of gasoline. A stock model Chevrolet is equipped with a one-quart Mason jar and attached to the outside of the car. Up to Wednesday night 153 drivers had tried their skill, and mileage ranging from 3 miles to 3.34 miles per pint had been turned in. This gives the unusual average of 27.36 miles per gallon on all drives. So far, Frank Powles of Antioch holds first place with a 3.84 miles. Mrs. Frank Morgan is second with 3.8 miles, and Fred Stahmer holds third place with a record of 3.4.

Drivers Try Various Speeds
All drivers go over the same route, which offers a real test for any car. Route 21, Milwaukee avenue, is the course, and G. A. Whitmore, official observer, turns on the gas connection that begins burning the previous pint of gasoline just as the car leaves the city limits.

Some of the contestants drive Chevrolet in high at speeds ranging from 4 to 8 miles per hour, while others attempt to make good records with 45 to 65 miles per hour. Mr. Whitmore, Chevrolet dealer, explained the high mileage records by saying that Chevrolet's construction offered unusual economy under all driving conditions.

Friday Is Ladies' Day
Friday has been set aside as Ladies' day, and Mr. Whitmore is expecting to see some real mileage registered by the ladies who have entered their names and are anxious to test their skill in the Chevrolet Six sedan being used for this contest.

The Whitmore Chevrolet Co. wants everyone in this community to try this wonderful test, and the management announces that appointments may be made by calling the salesroom by phone or calling in person to register. There are three prizes being offered—first prize, $25—second prize, $15—and third prize, $10.

Party Tuesday Night
Only two more days remain and prizes will be awarded the winners on next Tuesday evening at the salesroom at seven o'clock, when a party is being given by Mr. Whitmore for the contestants and their friends. There will be music by the Mellow Maniacs, dancing and refreshments. All are welcome.

D. G. A. R. TO MEET MONDAY NIGHT

The regular meeting of the National Daughters of G. A. R. will be held Monday night, August 25, in the Woodman hall. Comrades and officers are requested to be present.

Miss Cleo of Hopeville, Ill., is visiting at the home of the Misses Martha and Fanny Weetlake.

DADY IS LAKE COUNTY CHOICE FOR JUDGESHIP

Veteran Barrister and Former State's Att'y
Gets Endorsement

Ralph J. Dady, former state's attorney of Lake county, won a decisive victory Wednesday afternoon when the Lake County Central committee, in session in the court house, nominated him as the G. O. P. candidate for circuit judge to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Claire C. Edwards.

Of the 69 precinct committeemen in the county, 42 cast their votes for Dady, and 22, for Field. There were five absentees.

The delegates voting for Dady represent a vote of 20,961 while those for Field represented 10,282. The absentees represented a vote of 1,595.

Upon motion of John J. Spellman of Lake Forest, one of the leaders for Field, seconded by R. J. Kapling of Libertyville, also an ardent Field supporter, it was voted to cast the entire Lake County delegation solidly for Dady at the judicial convention to be held September 12.

Regarded as District Victory
Attorney Dady's victory in Lake county is regarded as equivalent to winning the district nomination, for when the 52 delegates for the judicial convention of the entire 17th circuit, meet September 12, delegates from McHenry, Boone and Winnebago counties are expected to follow Lake county's lead. This arrangement has been understood for many weeks.

At this district conference, Winnebago will vote 64 men, Boone 12, and McHenry 21. These counties have promised both factions that the choice that Lake county makes will be supported at the district caucus. The actual election, at which the public gets to vote, has been set for Nov. 4, by Governor Louis L. Emmerson.

Heated Campaign Ends
The calling of the meeting brought to a close a heated campaign. Partisans of Dady and Field combed the county for weeks in an effort to swing the delegates into their columns.

The Field forces terminated their effort in a dinner at which every one gathered prior to going to the county building to cast the votes that would puncture the claims and counterclaims of the rivals.

Volliva Licked Again
Wilbur Glen Volliva, overlord of Zion, once again feels the sting of defeat politically as a result of the defeat of Attorney Field for whom he had instructed his five committeemen to vote. Volliva's decision came late Tuesday.

KEEP YOUR CREDIT GOOD

Your rating with the business and professional men in Antioch does not mean "are you a good fellow"—"a good talker," "a good intender"—it means "ARE YOU GOOD PAY?"

Last week, in a community not far from here, there was a story something like this about a certain $10 bill:

Mr. Smith owed Mr. Jones a $10 cash loan; he paid it promptly on the day he said he would. (Mr. Jones will be glad to loan Mr. Smith money again if need should arise.) Mr. Jones dropped into the meat market for a roast for Mrs. Jones that day, and paid the $10 on his meat bill. The butcher, Mr. Wagner, gave the same $10 to his wife who had reminded him that the dressmaker's bill was due that day. Mrs. Wagner paid the dressmaker. The dressmaker, Mrs. Brown, was then able to pay the dry goods merchant for her account, and the dry goods merchant, with that $10 and other collections from other "paying people" was able to meet his loan at the bank promptly. Everybody paid up, everybody happy.

Mr. Smith, Mr. Jones, Mrs. Wagner, Mrs. Brown and the dry goods man all protected their credit with each other and the other business and professional people involved in the hundreds of little business transactions that go to make up community living.

Reverse the story and see how easily no one would have gotten their money, and all written "slow" for themselves instead of "prompt."

Too often we don't stop to think "what's in a name" in time to give that name a gilt-edged credit rating that is a more dear possession than the ordinary person ever realizes.

If you can keep your credit good with me I can keep my credit good with my creditors and so on around the circle. And when YOUR credit rating is good, and

MY credit rating is good, and WE ALL HAVE good ratings, then Antioch has a "PROMPT" rating, and we have scored winning points in the game of making Antioch THE ONE COMMUNITY IN-TEN!

AN ENCOURAGING SIGN

One of the most encouraging signs of the times is the great amount of attention now being given the problem of accident prevention by individuals, officials and private organizations.

The terrible toll of fatalities due to the automobile, which last year reached the record figure of 31,000, must be reduced. Laws to keep the congenitally reckless and incompetent from highways must be passed in every state. Financial responsibility laws which differ from compulsory insurance in that they place the burden where it belongs—on those who cause accidents—have been tried with success in several states and are proposed in others. The drivers' examination law, said to be the greatest need, is being advocated throughout the nation.

The great majority of people are competent, careful and responsible. Their lives and property must be protected.

THE GASOLINE PROBLEM

The oil industry, through economies in operation and improved refining methods, has made a remarkable record in lowering the cost of gasoline to motorists.

In 1913 the average retail price of gasoline was 16.8 cents a gallon, and on May 1, 1930, it was 17.13 cents, excluding the tax. In the years between, the cost of living and the average cost of all commodities increased 74 per cent. Yet the advance in gasoline prices has been but two per cent, and in effect the industry has saved the public the difference between 29.2 cents, the price gas would have been, based on the increase in living costs, and 17.13 cents.

This is probably one of the main reasons why the upward tendency of gasoline taxation has not been strongly opposed during the last few years. Gasoline is one of the cheapest commodities and most motorists feel that they can well afford to pay, in addition, one, two or three cents tax for road work.

However, the situation has been rapidly getting out of control. It is a case of riding a good horse to death. Today three states levy a tax of six cents a gallon; nine have a five-cent tax and eight charge four cents. Legislation calling for higher rates is pending in several states. This year it is estimated that the average motorist will pay $20 for gasoline tolls alone. And, to complete the story, gasoline tax funds have been used for other purposes than road work in some states.

A reasonable gas tax, all of which is used for roads, is sound. But the public is beginning to show that it resents the political attitude of "one cent more won't make any difference."

IT'S WISE TO CHOOSE A SIX

Announcing a new production record

2,000,000 Chevrolet Sixes now on the road

Since January, 1929, Chevrolet has produced and sold over 2,000,000 six-cylinder automobiles—nearly five times as many as any other manufacturer has ever built in an equal length of time.

These 2,000,000 buyers have chosen Chevrolet because it offers many desirable qualities not obtainable in any other car so low in price—

—the smoothness, silence and flexibility of a modern six-cylinder engine—the comfort and roadability of a modern, full-length chassis—and the style, safety and distinction of bodies by Fisher.

Yet, despite these fine car advantages, the Chevrolet Six is unusually economical. Its gas, oil, tire and upkeep economy is unsurpassed. And

Summer Dessert

The old Polar bear must have felt his ears tingle, with all the housewives thinking about him so much, and so blew down a breath of cold for spite. He is too good-natured to hold a grudge, though, and we can expect some more heat.

What are you doing about your desserts these days? Do you bake or buy cake or pie for every meal? Or do you send your boy to the nearest drug store to get a quart of ice cream? Frozen desserts are fine, in the summer, but if you want to give your family a real treat try the following combination.

Take a package of lemon Jell-O, dissolve in two cups of boiling water, and set aside to cool. When cool, set it in the ice box until nearly hard. Beat the whites of two eggs until stiff. When the Jell-O is hard enough, beat it with the egg beater until it becomes full of bubbles, but do not beat to a liquid. Let set till it again hardens to a jelly-like firmness, and then fold in a cup of diced pineapple. (The pineapple need not be diced into very small pieces, as it will reduce the amount and lose its distinctiveness of flavor.) Then fold in the egg white, and all sherbert glasses. Top with sweetened whip-cream if possible.

This same procedure can be followed with different flavors in the Jell-O and with various kinds of fruit, as oranges, peaches, pears, grapes, strawberries, and bananas.

Serve with coconut macaroons.

Receipt for Coconut Macaroons
Coconut macaroons are delicious not only with Jell-O, but with sandwiches, or lemonade, or cocktail, when you wish to serve your afternoon callers something dainty, but unusual. Or even at a formal tea party, a hostess may well be proud to serve this light fluffy golden brown confection.

Beat the whites of two large eggs until stiff, add cup of granulated sugar, tablespoon of flour, small pinch of cream of tartar, and salt. Stir in two cups of cornflakes and about 1-8 of a pound of shredded coconut. Add a little vanilla. Drop from teaspoon onto a very well greased pan, and bake in a moderate hot oven, ten minutes or more, or until a golden brown.

The amount of cornflakes and coconut may vary according to how large the eggs are. The mixture should not be dry, neither should it drip easily from a spoon.

What is Baking Powder?

Did your little girl ever ask you what baking powder came from? If so, were you able to answer her? Or had you just taken baking powder for granted, as among the "necessary evils" of baking?

The Cream of Tartar Baking Powders are manufactured originally from grapes. Ripe grapes are pressed and the juice allowed to stand for a long time. In this juice there is formed gradually, just as in sugar syrup, small crystals or argols, which retain the coloring matter of the grapes. The longer the juice stands the larger the crystals become. These argols are crude and unrefined when shipped to this country and from them cream of tartar crystals are produced by washing out all the coloring matter and recrystallizing. These pure white crystals are then ground to a powder giving, as the cream of tartar which with tartaric acid, derived like-wise from grapes, is used in the manufacture of cream of tartar baking powders. Baking soda or bicarbonate of soda, from which comes the carbon-dioxide gas, is used in all baking powders. Corn starch is used in practically all baking powder to keep the powder dry.

I have not the slightest doubt but that you are just as good a cook, even if you were not informed by what processes baking powder arrived at its present form. But when your daughter next "springs" that question, you will have an intelligent answer on the tip of your tongue.

TOPPY'S TRAVELS

Topsy was tired; too tired even to play with Brother Jackie. He lay on the floor and watched Sister Nancy sew. In and out, through and through, went her needle. Wonderful flowers appeared on the cloth. Nancy was making a pillow for Mommy. Why was the pillow doing such crazy things? One of the flowers was talking, yes, speaking real words. Topsy could hear it. The flower was a big pansy.

"Let's go out and play," Pansy said to Linny, the canary. Topsy wondered what Linny would do. Sometimes Linny was happy, and sang all day. But sometimes he ruffled himself all up, and gulped, like a naughty baby.

Topsy suddenly jumped up from the floor. Linny was coming out of his cage. He couldn't, but, you see, he did. Pansy floated through the door, and Linny followed her. Topsy ran after them. "Come back, please come back, Linny," he cried out. But Linny flew away on, never heeding.

Topsy's eyes became bright with tears of anger. "You bad, bad bird, come back," he shouted. What would Mommy say when she found out that Linny was gone? And Nancy would want her pansy for the pillow.

Topsy stumbled on, whether the bird and pansy led, entreating, "Linny, Linny, where are you? It is night, Linny, let's go home." But Linny never stopped.

At last Topsy sat down on a stone to rest. He was so tired.

After a while he said aloud, "I guess I'll go home."

A voice sounded beside him, "Why do you want to do that?"

Topsy was surprised. He looked down and there was big, fat Goggles.

Goggles was the Frog that stayed in their garden at home.

"Oh, hello, Goggles," Topsy said, "Why are you so far from home?"

"My name is not Goggles, and I'm only a foot from home," the Frog answered crossly.

Topsy didn't like to be spoken to like that. "Your name is Goggles," he declared indignantly; "Mommy said it was, and she knows."

Mr. Frog puffed himself up. "Don't talk to me," he croaked.

Topsy sat still for a long time. Then he stood up and began to walk away.

"Where are you going?" asked Mr. Frog.

"I am going home."

"Where is your home?" asked Mr. Frog.

Topsy looked all around, and began to cry, "I don't know. I'm lost," he sobbed, "and I can't find Linny."

Mr. Frog looked at him. "If you won't call me Goggles, you can stay with me tonight, and we'll find Linny tomorrow," he said in a gruff, though kindly tone.

Topsy dried his tears. "Oh, thank you."

Mr. Frog led Topsy by the hand to a little house made of sticks. He gave him some mushrooms and berries to eat, and then put him to bed on a soft pile of thistledown. Topsy soon fell sound asleep.

Race Drivers DEMAND
the TIRES WE SELL!

THE Indianapolis 500 Mile Endurance Race is famous as an endurance test and battle of tires for no driver can win this race who has tire trouble. He races over a hot brick track at a speed of 100 or more miles per hour. For eleven consecutive years Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have been on the winning cars.

FOR years the w hazardous race of climb—where a death—used Firestone Gum-
Dipped Tires.

1. THESE drivers do not simply choose Firestone Tires. They demand them. They know by experience that this tire never fails. It never fails because it is built not to fail by the special Firestone processes of tire building.

(a) Every fibre of cotton thread going into the making of the cord fabric, which is the foundation of the tire, is coated and cushioned in rubber by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process.

(b) Under the tread is the Firestone patented Gum-Dipped Double Cord Breaker—which means not only two extra plies where most needed, but also sets the Firestone Tire apart as an all cord tire, while others are woven fabric and cord.

(c) Firestone Super High Speed Tires now have 32% more rubber in the tread, giving deeper grooves that will give you over 50% more non-skid wear before the tire is smooth.

2. THESE are not just features. They are basic differences in tire building proved by service on every kind of road and track.

3. YOU may never intend to race. You may never intend even to speed. You may never climb Pike's Peak. But, every day—whether you know it or not—your life depends upon your tires.

4. WE HAVE these Super High Speed Gum-Dipped Balloons for sale today. They are the same tires that the racing drivers demand—the premier tires of the world. Their first cost is low. Their cost per mile of service makes them cheaper today than even cheap tires. They are inexpensive, not only because the price of rubber is low, but because we have joined with Firestone to bring into the sale of tires the same degree of efficiency which goes into their manufacture. The benefit of all this is in the price to you.

5. DRIVE IN TODAY. We will examine your tires and make you an allowance for your unused mileage. We can equip your car with new Firestone Super High Speed Tires at a much lower cost than you ever expected. They will give you unequalled service and satisfaction.

St. Peter's Church Carnival Draws Crowd

The Carnival, held under the auspices of the Catholic church, is now in full swing. The Carnival began Sunday, and will close this Sunday, August 24.

Anyone who has an inquiring or curious disposition will be in danger of missing something if they do not attend.

The success of the Carnival is due largely to the generous efforts of the members of St. Peter's church, who have given their time and labor without stint.

KONJOLA MADE REAL RECORD IN STUBBORN CASE

New Medicine Ends Ailments of Fifteen Years — Wins Lasting Friend

MRS. D. E. BELMEYER

"For more than fifteen years I suffered from stomach and bowel troubles, said Mrs. D. E. Belmeyer, Route No. 2, Taylor, Mo., near Quincy. "I bloated frightfully after meals and often suffered from heartburn. I had a pain in my right side and was subject to dizzy spells. My color was bad and for some years I had been very nervous. I was then attacked by sharp pains in my shoulders and arms. Sleep became more and more difficult.

"I was more than satisfied with the results that I received after I had taken three bottles of Konjola. I have taken eight bottles to date and can truthfully say that Konjola has done more good than all other medicines and treatments put together. My bowels are regular, I do not bloat after meals and my nerves are calm. Neuritis pains have left my arms and shoulders. I am in better health than I have been in fifteen years."

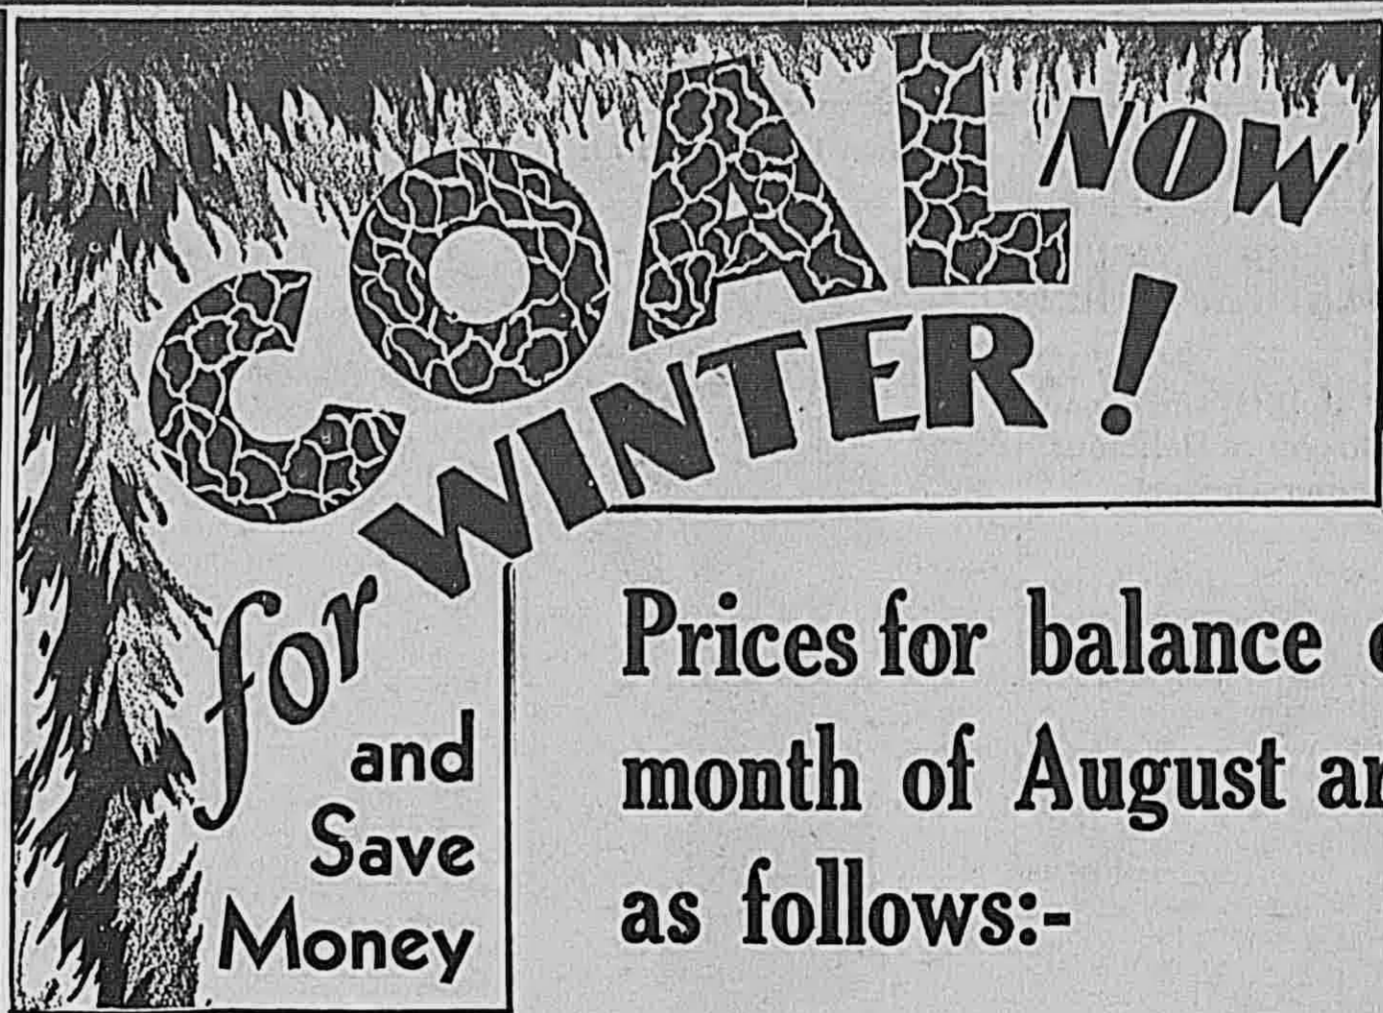

This is the usual result when Konjola is given a real test. From six to eight bottles is the recommended treatment in most cases.

Konjola is sold in Antioch, Illinois, at S. H. Reeves' drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

ANTIOCH DEFEATS SOMERS FOR FIRST LEAGUE VICTORY

Locals Edge Out Visitors, 7 to 6, in Fast Game Here Last Sunday

Somers	5	5	.500

Antioch	1	9	.100

It can be done. Antioch can win an Inter-County league ball game. Joe Miller's warriors proved it Sunday when they slugged out a 7 to 6 victory over Somers, thereby earning their way into the percentage column which heretofore had been decorated only with ciphers. Antioch now has a victory percentage of .100, which in round numbers means nine defeats and one win.

Antioch deserved to win. Miller's men played an aggressive game all the way, jumping on the offerings of Pitcher Dilly right in the first inning for four hits, which with the aid of a walk and an error, netted the locals four counters. From then on it was uphill job for Somers; however, they evened the count in the fourth frame and added two more runs in the fifth session to take the lead. But Antioch came right back in the seventh inning with two scores, and the game ended with Antioch one to the good, as both teams were held scoreless the remainder of the game.

Two More Games on Schedule

But two more games remain on the schedule of the Inter-County league. Antioch will play the league leaders here September 7, and again on the following Sunday on the Silver Lake diamond. On the same dates Wilmot Pirates will play Somers, the first game to be played at the Wilmot park and the final game of the season at Somers.

So far as the southern section of the league is concerned, Silver Lake is definitely established in first place, and Antioch at the bottom. Somers and Wilmot, now tied with .500 per cent each, will battle for second place.

Colored Stars Here Sunday

The North Chicago Giants are coming to Antioch Sunday to play the locals. The Giants are fast and funny and the game is sure to be entertaining, as well as presenting a good brand of baseball.

TIMELY TOPICS BY ANTIOCH PEOPLE

PROHIBITION

By Philip T. Bohl

The following little article recently came out in the American Union Insurance Magazine, entitled, "Prohibition Will Be Abandoned."

"When wives enjoy having their husbands who spend their pay checks in the saloon. When children prefer a drunken abusive father. When railroads decide to employ drinking men as engineers. When Life Insurance companies consider steady drinkers as better risks than total abstainers. When banks and business corporations advertise for clerks and bookkeepers who are habitual drinkers. When athletes who train on beer and wine beat total abstainers. When superintendents post the sign 'Tipplers and Drinking Men Wanted' at the gates of their factories. When credit men decide to class a 'rumhound' and 'boozer' a better risk than a sober man. When doctors tell their patients that a hard drinker has a better chance to pull through a serious operation than a abstainer. When great automobile corporations are willing to assist in placing a saloon at every cross road, so their customers can get as tipsy as they please and smash up as many cars as possible." When all this happens Prohibition will be abandoned.

The Volsted Act is not the only force working in behalf of Prohibition. Present day industrialism demands abstinence from the use of alcoholic drinks. Even a bartender will lose his job if he is habitually drunk. Alcohol in domestic and home life spells destruction for the home. The economic order is unsteady where there is unrestrained use of alcoholic drinks. And what good program, social and political, does drinking fit into to advantage? In addition to these influences both the cradle and the grave are working in the interest of Prohibition. Another decade and the drinking survivors of saloon days will all be gone. We even now hear only the dying echoes of their pleas for the return of the "good old days."

There is something inconsistent in the arguments against Prohibition. We are told by some that there is just as much drinking now as when we had the open saloon. Now if this is true why are the wets fighting Prohibition? If there is just as much drinking why are the Liquor Interests so much disturbed about Prohibition?

George B. Tarr, of Cold Springs, Okla., tells the following concerning pre-prohibition days. He said, "I was a freight brakeman for the Union Pacific R. R. working out of Golden, Colorado, in 1861. In 1882 I was given a regular crew as conductor, ahead of three extra conductors that used whiskey."

"In pre-Prohibition days, I have seen drunken men dragged out of saloons, night after night, in winter, to be exposed to the cold world, penniless. The saloonkeeper had taken their last dime. The miners at Lawson, Colorado, would go to Georgetown, seven miles, each pay-day, drink and gamble their money away, and they kept it up for five years. I know, for I was conductor of the trains they rode on. In Kansas City, Missouri, I went in the back door, Wabash ave., of a Union Avenue saloon. The back room had benches and thirteen drunken men; three of them were on the floor. The next room had chairs and tables and the occupants were drinking and playing cards. The next or front room had a bar and counter with a large mirror and several beer-slingers. This room was also well filled with intoxicated men. Their wives were at home, taking in washing, to get food and clothing for the half-starved and nearly naked children."

Any one who remembers conditions prior to the 18th Amendment must admit that the above picture is not overdrawn. And such conditions were not confined alone to the places mentioned. They were typical of all industrial centers. Where in our United States of America can we go and find such conditions today? And who can say that Prohibition has had nothing to do with bringing about this change?

Commemorates Victories

One of the interesting sights in Quebec is a small church—Notre Dame des Victoires—so called because it was erected to commemorate the defeat of one English fleet under the command of Sir William Phipps, sent to capture the city, and the destruction of another formidable British flotilla by a terrific storm in the Gulf of St. Lawrence in 1711.

One of the rarest of nature's human phenomena has found expression in six-year-old Gerald Kay of Newman, Ill. Gerald surprised his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Kay, when he was a baby by whistling before he could talk. It appeared that he was equipped with a double set of vocal cords, the extra set being known as the "robin" or "bird" type. Now, at the age of six, Gerald is able to whistle or warble in his throat, while eating any kind of food.

McCormick-Deering Improved No. 12 Ensilage Cutter

THE improved McCormick-Deering No. 12 Ensilage Cutter is the enclosed-gear machine that is making friends by its economical performance. The one-piece, bridge-type main frame encloses the fly-wheel, cutter, transmission, and apron drive. All working parts are in an oil-tight, dust-proof housing and run in a bath of oil. Gears are especially cut and heat-treated. To vary the length of cut on the No. 12, merely shift a lever outside the housing. A selective-gear type of transmission, similar to that in an automobile, controls the speed of the feed table. The large, reinforced boiler plate flywheel with eight steel wings is safe at all working speeds. See us about this improved model that cuts from 10 to 16 tons per hour.

THE BACK SEAT IS NO LONGER detachable

"Without tonneau," an automobile advertisement of twenty-five years ago proclaimed, "the touring car is the smartest of runabouts." The "detachable tonneau" of a bygone day, providing the motorist with "two cars in one," has become the modern rumble seat. As the automobile developments came, one motor oil—Shell—has always been ready for every new lubrication requirement. Shell

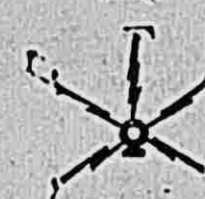

Motor Oil is ready now for the cars which will be announced next year: Nature's best-balanced crude and Shell's low-temperature refining combine to prepare Shell Motor Oil for any service... to make it safer in any demand you may make on your motor. That explains why so many are changing to Shell Motor Oil for its improved performance and longer motor life. Have you tried it?

KARL OGREN PUNCHES WAY TO VICTORY OVER BILLY LEHMANN

600 Fans See Opening Show At Channel Lake

8 STAR BOUTS FRIDAY NIGHT

A crowd of 600 boxing fans Friday night saw Karl Ogren, winner of the Chicago Tribune Inter-City Golden Gloves championship, punch his way to victory over Billy Lehmann, the Illinois State Outdoor welterweight champion, in the feature bout of the initial amateur boxing show at the Channel Lake pavilion.

Ogren had little trouble in winning all three rounds from his opponent, and the fight served as a splendid climax to a good card.

In the semi-windup attraction, Carl Smialk, Chicago stockyards scrapper, won over Chet Upham, Kenosha red-head, on a technical kayo when Referee "Jabber" Young stopped the fight in the fourth round when Upham became violently ill from the effects of Smialk's body blows.

The supporting bouts, with but one exception, the heavyweight fight, were all good to watch. Boxers were evenly matched and fast action made the whole show a success from the spectator's view-point.

Winch Is Pleased

Manager Homer Winch of the Pavilion expressed himself as being well pleased with the results of the first show and announced that permanent arrangements had been made with Henry Wallenwein and Referee George Young to stage the bouts every Friday night.

Second Show Friday

The second of the amateur shows will be staged at the Pavilion tomorrow night when Joe Espinoza, golden glove winner, meets Nick Seilaba, Illinois outdoor champion, in the windup of an exceptionally good card. Two colored bouts are carded, Earl Watson meeting George Taylor of Waukegan in the semi-windup, and Heywood Storey and J. Taylor mixing in the fifth bout.

The second bout will bring together Buddy Moore and Tony Mascarillo, Howard Craft and Phil Bernice will appear in the third fight. Other fast steppers will be seen in the remaining bouts, making up an all-star card of eight.

CHANNEL LAKE COUNTRY CLUB NEWS

The "Treasure Hunt" of Saturday night, sponsored by the Young People of the Club, brought out a large representation, and thirty-six joined in the fun. The Loven car, driven by Maurice Loven, won the treasure, "Maurice" being the only one who found every clue. The affair was very successfully planned by Mrs. Walter Stevens, and many of the "clues" were most puzzling, and kept the young people guessing until a late hour.

Next Saturday night there will be another community dinner, followed by a short play presented by members of the Club. These dinners, which are arranged by the "dining room" committee, are most popular, and this one promises to be unusually interesting. Mrs. Warriner of Antioch, chairman of this committee, would like to have the reservations in not later than Friday of this week, as they must plan for an approximate number.

The card party on Tuesday had the usual good luncheon served by Mmes. Mills, Smyth, Simons and Potter. Mrs. Paul Juhnke furnished the ladies another delightful "treat" by bringing her guest, Mrs. Emma Kreicker of Lake Catherine, who sang several songs in a most pleasing manner.

As this paper goes to print, the ladies are arranging for a very humorous time on the golf course on Thursday morning. It is to be a fancy dress event, with a prize offered for the funniest costume. This is first party of this kind the club has had, and no doubt it will prove a great success. The regular golf luncheon follows the play, and a large crowd is expected.

Do not forget the dance scheduled for the Saturday night before Labor Day, and get in an early reservation with Mrs. Sandell, the chairman.

The club members are giving and attending many private parties during these last weeks of the summer season. There were forty in attendance at the luncheon and "bridge" given at the Hill Top Tea Room by Mesdames Jurden, Tankersley, Sandell and Laflin. On Thursday Mrs. Bledsoe of Lake Catherine is having a "bridge" and buffet supper, and on Friday the small children of the club are to be given a party at the club house. Mrs. Carl Gallauer is chairman for this event and about forty children are expected to participate in the good time.

Next week promises to be another very full week, as cards are out for a party on Wednesday, given by Mesdames Cressman, Gray and Mack. On Thursday Mrs. Gallauer is entertaining for luncheon, and on Friday Mrs. Cooper is also entertaining for luncheon.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Van Pelt have issued invitations for the wedding of their daughter, Herberta to Carl C. Branson, on Thursday evening, Sept. 4th, at the Joseph Bond chapel at the University of Chicago.

A reception follows at Swift Commons, and the congratulations of the club members are extended to the young pair.

Lake Villa - Grayslake Folks To Tour Wisconsin and Mich.

On Monday, August 18, Mrs. Joe Nader and small sons, Buddy and Ralph, Miss Bernice Nader, Miss Hazel Tweed, all of Lake Villa, and Mrs. Clarence Nader and infant son, Jimmy, of Grayslake, are motoring to Oconto, Wisconsin, and to Michigan. They will visit the parents of Mrs. Clarence Nader and expect to be gone two weeks, visiting many places of interest.

HOW ARE YOU RATED?

"How's Jones rated?"

"PROMPT!" comes the unhesitating reply from the Credit Association.

The answer could have been one of four:

Prompt
Good Fair
Bad

The Credit Association didn't MAKE this rating for Jones. They simply RECORDED the rating which JONES MADE FOR HIMSELF, and passed the information along to the business man.

By meeting his bills promptly by the 10th of every month, Jones had established himself as a safe credit risk, and had earned the BEST of CREDIT RATINGS!

And, inasmuch as over 80 per cent of all business is done on a credit basis, Jones had shown wise judgment in not neglecting the PROMPT payment of his accounts. He had SAFE-GUARDED HIS BUYING POWER, AND INCREASED HIS PRESTIGE!

There is no secret about HOW to pay your bills promptly, and keep your credit and self-respect. The answer is a budget! Figure possible expenses on a monthly basis and put someone in charge of the payment of accounts. Have them see that ALL of the past month's bills are paid NOT LATER than the 10th of the following month!

Carelessness in the payment of accounts does not necessarily mean intentional dishonesty. But it is difficult for the business man to make the distinction. It's better NOT to be careless; it MIGHT be misunderstood.

Remember:—The greatest percentage of credit losses come not from INTENTIONAL DISHONESTY, but from carelessness and negligence.

WE can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. #### CHAPTER XIV—Continued

"Right! Entirely right," agreed Joshua, taking the petition at last. "There ought to be a watchman outside. If there is, tell him I wish the governor to wait upon us. He may assure his excellency 'tis of supreme importance."

Fellowes was heart sick over the situation. Manifestly, Joshua was in no disposition to show mercy; and so soon as the governor came the wheels of justice would commence to grind: deposition, indictment, testimony, affidavit, summation, charge, all leading up to the inevitable verdict—and sentence. And he could do nothing, merely sit and view the tragedy, which was the consequence of his own deeds. Himself, as he had said to Cara, the real executioner.

Joshua had just finished reading the petition to Lord Liverpool. The paper trembled in the merchant's hand; he glared triumphantly at his brother and niece, but he quickly looked away from Cara. Not easy, even for so stout a hater as Joshua Inglepin, to enjoy gloating over the frail gallantry of that slim figure in the saffron-yellow gown.

"Dammie, 'tis the brains of the federalist party, Fellowes," Joshua greeted the Long Islander, and there was a noticeable quaver in his voice. "We've got 'em all—in one noose. We'll wipe 'em out."

"They'd wipe themselves out, if you but let them be. Any party stupid enough to father a paper like that can never last."

"Stupid is right," Joshua agreed. "Devilish stupid. Just what I'd expect of Ben's friends." He leered contemptuously at his brother. "Always over-reaching yourself, Ben."

Cara exclaimed, with a cutting contempt that brought a blush to Joshua's cheeks:

"Neither my father nor I would seek to evade responsibility for what we have done, sir; but we are one in regretting we launched a plan which might have harmed our country, although that is perhaps to be questioned."

Joshua regarded her sourly. "Perhaps to be questioned!" To have succeeded with New England and factions in York and Jersey? And under protection of the Crown? Egad, young woman, you're an optimist! At the least, 'twould have lost us the war."

"'Twould have ended the war," she corrected him, keeping her temper. "One part of our plan was to insist the British must not take advantage of our efforts. We desired no more than their support against aggression from the federal government. And we were persuaded that hostilities would cease instantly, and a peace be negotiated."

"Aye, and the British would have gobbled you up—and the rest of us, later," fumed Joshua. "A divided republic is a helpless republic."

Cara sighed. "However honest was our purpose, sir," she said, "we came to see 'twas unfair, in that it struck from behind at other Americans, who were exposing their lives for what they believed right."

A sneer twisted Joshua's lips. "So?" he answered. "And how chanced this wondrous metamorphosis?"

For the first time she was embarrassed. And it was her father who answered the question.

"We are indebted to Captain Fellowes and his officers and men for that, Jos." He smiled slightly. "After all, we are Americans, Cara and I. We couldn't see Americans fighting as they fought, and escape a sense of obligation to them. Some died for the flag, and 'tis as much my flag as yours. You Democrats have no more claim to it than we Federalists."

Joshua appended to Fellowes. "A likely yarn, captain! A bid for sympathy, damme!"

"We want none of your sympathy," Cara flared at him before Fellowes could speak. "We are not ashamed of what we have done. We are sorry—if you can understand that. But we are not ashamed or unwilling to stand our punishment. We were wrong, that is all. And you will do a wicked thing, if you visit upon all those men—" she pointed to the petition, "the vengeance of party feeling. They are not to blame for it. Nor is my father. 'Twas my plan in the beginning, and 'twas I who obtained the support of ministers in London for it. No, no, Father! You can't deny me. 'Tis the truth. Aye, and Captain Fellowes knows it for the truth. He saw me with Lord Wellington in Lisbon."

"Now, now, Cara! I will be heard," Ben was so dismayed that he stammered. "I-i-s-s-see here, Jos, she's entirely wrong. The child was my agent throughout. She's innocent."

"Tis I who'm to blame. Not me, 'tis the truth! And—y-y-you know, you haven't any r-right to hate her. 'Tis I you hate. And what's the use of making party feeling more bitter than it is? Publish that list of signatures, arrest all the poor devils I tempted into the affair—and what will it bring you? A scandal that will wreck the country more surely than I planned to do it."

"He's right," cried Fellowes. "You must believe them, Mr. Inglepin."

There was bewilderment in Joshua's ruddy face. "Taking their side?" he queried. "Why, I thought you—don't you hate 'em, too?"

"I don't hate anyone," Fellowes answered slowly. "I'm through with hate."

"Ah, but you've satisfied your hate," protested Joshua. "Chatter's dead. And Collishaw. And—"

"I have no regrets for Chatter," Fellowes interrupted. "I'm not going to be a hypocrite about that. But killing him didn't make me any happier. And for Collishaw—I'd cheerfully give my own life, if that would bring him back. I did a brave, honorable man an injustice, and then procured his death—just as you will do, if you send your brother to the gallows. Or your niece. Or anyone whose name is on that paper."

"They're all traitors," fumed Joshua. "Don't deserve consideration. Of course, a woman's a different matter. But a traitor is a traitor, and all the talk in the world won't alter that."

Fellowes was struck by the stubborn tone of his employer, a faintly pugnacious attitude of self-defense. "Are you honest with yourself, sir?" the Long Islander challenged him swiftly. "How much of your indignation springs from patriotism and how much from personal hatred?"

"Why—why—why—" Joshua was balked, palpably dismayed, but he floundered on. "The facts are evident. And if I do hate a man, is that a reason to excuse his treason?"

"No, but 'tis ample reason to examine your own feelings," rejoined Fellowes. "You have endeavored to ruin your brother—haven't you?"

"I have ruined him," scowled Joshua.

"Yes, you hold his life and reputation in your hand, there. Will it make you happier to use your power over him? Think, Mr. Inglepin! Are you happier, now? Have you felt more at rest in your mind since I gave you that paper?"

"Why not?" Joshua answered slowly. "I've hated him for years. A loose-thinking, aristocratic sort of fellow, always opposed to me."

"And you've always been opposed to him. Can't you be in opposition without killing him?"

"'Tisn't just that I want to see him swing," denied Joshua, ruddier than ever, the note of defense heavily stressed. "Dammie, that's a vulgar idea, Fellowes."

"You are trying to satisfy your own hatred," snapped Fellowes. "And you can't do it. You know you can't do it. The closer you hug your hate, the spicier it grows. If you yield to it, you'll be miserable for the rest of your life. If you hold it off, you'll place your brother under an obligation."

A glint of humor flashed in Joshua's china-blue eyes; his wide mouth quirked up at the corners.

"By G-d, you're right!" he exclaimed. "Why hang him when I can make him owe me what money can't buy, eh?"

Hoofs rattled in front street.

"'Tis the governor," warned Fellowes.

"D-n the governor," Joshua blustered cavalierly. "Where's my flint-steel? And that candle? I can never find anything in this place."

Fellowes watched him with an amazement shared in full by Ben and Cara. Only the duenna remained uninterested, the hands clicking through her mittened fingers, while Joshua struck spark to tinder, and lit the candle he extracted from a cubbyhole of his desk.

"There," he announced triumphantly. "What d'ye think of this, Ben? Here's a debt you won't soon pay off, my lad!"

And he stabbed a corner of the petition into the candle flame, which blazed up magnificently. A thin trickle of smoke drifted across the room, and Fellowes heard Ben coughing, saw tears in Cara's eyes, but the smoke hadn't drifted in their direction.

Joshua chuckled to himself. "Ah, you thought you could get on without me, but all you did was to make a fool of yourself. And I caught you, Ben, I caught you fairly!"

"Fairly, Jos," Ben agreed. "And I can't pay off the debt—except to say 'I'm sorry—for what happened before this!'"

"Sorry, eh? Ouch, damme! Burned my fingers. Well, the thing's done." He hesitated as the last charred flakes of the deadly petition floated to the floor. "Sorry eh? 'Matter of fact, go on L. Hanged it—ah, no, no!—d-d—if I can remember what it was all about."

"Need you care, Uncle Jos?" asked Cara, between laughter and weeping. "S'pose not, s'pose not, niece!" Joshua admitted. "Still—"

"Oh, won't you two shake hands?" she begged. "Can't we be a family instead of enemies?"

Her father stepped forward promptly, and after a moment Joshua met him, arm outstretched.

"God bless you, Jos!"

"Eh? Eh? Seem to have something in my eye. Mind those fingers, Ben."

The door to the outer office was flung open, Nimrod Sophor standing at attention beside it.

"His excellency the governor," boomed the lawyer, and Governor Tompkins bustled into the room, bowing to Cara, plainly puzzled by the spectacle of the Inglepin brothers clasping hands.

"Your servant, ma'am," said his excellency. "Am I to witness a reconciliation, gentlemen? I heard the Centurion was in, and thought from your message—"

"Governor, I burned the d-n paper!" Joshua confessed. "Hang the whole Federalist party—hang Ben—hang my niece, here? Couldn't go it. Ben's learned his lesson, so's the girl. The rest of 'em—Well, they'll eat out of any feed bag we hitch on 'em, soon as they hear we know their little scheme."

A smile warmed the governor's homely features.

"You did the right thing, Joshua," he pronounced. "Party hatred is as evil a thing as personal hatred, old friend. You've found that out, I see. Good! So let's all sit down, and talk it over reasonably and—But where's Captain Fellowes gone?"

Fellowes had done all he could do, he felt. His one desire was to avoid Cara Inglepin. If he didn't see her, perhaps he could forget her in time. At least, it would be better than trying not to look at her, struggling against the pricks of what-might-have-been, cursing himself for useless jealousy of a dead man.

CHAPTER XV

Mary McCarthy Intervenes

Fellowes had scarcely reached the waterfront when his name was called behind him in a brogue thicker than O'Shaughnessy's—"Misther Fellowes! Capt'n, sir! Oh, Mother av God, will ye—"

And he turned to face the waddling bulk of the duenna, her tail-lows features crimson for once as she panted an incoherent stream of prayers, denunciations and salutes' names:

"Ain't ye got the sinse ye was born wid? Oh, holy Brigit, the wind's clane gone out av me! Shure, 'tis me end I'm at this minit!"

In one lightning-flash of memory Fellowes reviewed the moment of his leaving the True Bounty in the Badger's quarterboat. It hadn't been imagination, after all, that glimpse of the strange creature at the cabin window, and the fragment of brogue he had thought he heard. But what on earth could be the reason for her pre-tending ignorance of English?

"By your leave, ma'am!" he rasped sharply. "You've deceived me many months. How d'you excuse it?"

Her face fell, and the gibbous left her speech.

"Ah, now, yer honor! Don't be ather wringin' yerself into a wurtherin' rage—and me no more nor fearful for a full stomach—and sorra the chance av that more often nor not, what wid the worry was on me and the fret av the say."

"That's no answer," he told her, with what he knew was mock-severity.

"Ah, but then Sisters, sorr!" she sighed. "For ever ather me becasse I tuk a bite and a sup becume meals, and cryin' out loud if I had more nor a hunk o' salt fish to me dinner."

To save himself, Fellowes couldn't resist a smile.

"You mean you were in a convent?" he asked. "Were you expelled?"

"I'll thank ye not to asperse me, repytashun," she retorted angrily. "Expelled! Divil a bit! All this ould tartar would be sayin' was: 'Mary darlin', don't ye think ye'd do better in privet service?' 'Tis me loves ye like me own flesh-and-blood, but 'twas never a convent ye was born for. And when the world come me young leddy was for settin' up a duenna, in the Portuguese style, she says to me, Mother Seraphina, she says: 'And here's God's own blessed chance for ye, Mary darlin', but 'tis Portuguese ye must be, and see ye, never let on there's a drop av Irish blood into ye or a word av English on yer tongue.'"

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Crime of Eugene Aram

THE murder committed by Eugene Aram—and perpetuated in Hood's ballad, "The Dream of Eugene Aram" and Bulwer Lytton's romance, "Eugene Aram"—was remarkable not only on account of the unusual attainments of the criminal who was one of the leading linguists of his time, but also because of the fact that no evidence of the murder was adduced for fourteen years after the crime was committed.

Eugene Aram was a self-taught genius. He had received only a scanty education from his parents but, by dint of the most persevering energy, he secured an excellent knowledge of mathematics and an extensive acquaintance with Latin and Greek, as well as with the Hebrew and Chaldean languages. He taught Latin and writing at a school in London and was afterwards employed as usher and assistant to Rev. Anthony Hinton at his boarding school in Middlesex.

In 1744 Aram murdered Daniel Clarke and then successfully concealed all traces of his crime until the accidental discovery of a skeleton fourteen years later led to the conclusion that a murder had been committed, in spite of the fact that it was later found that the skeleton was not that of Clarke. Aram was apprehended on suspicion, tried at York in 1759, and found guilty on evidence supported by the testimony of his own wife. Although his counsel fought the case through on every conceivable ground, after conviction, Aram admitted the justice of his sentence and endeavored to commit suicide by opening an artery in his arm with a razor. But, despite his weakened condition, he was taken to the gallows in York where he was hanged, his body being later hung in chains in the forest of Knarborough.

During a portion of the fourteen years between the murder and its discovery Aram was employed as assistant to Mr. Hinton, who frequently observed that whenever Aram saw a worm or any other insect in the gravel walks of the garden, he carefully removed it to a secure position where it could not possibly be stepped upon. When the murder of Clarke was discovered and Aram convicted, it occurred to Mrs. Hinton that the murderer had evidently supposed that he could atone for his crime by preserving the lives of animals and that, by frequently showing mercy and tenderness to the lower forms of life, the killing of a man would either be obliterated or his guilt considerably lessened.

At length Mr. Hinton discovered that his assistant was a thief, for, hearing some persons in the garden early one morning, the head master immediately investigated, but found only a sack full of potatoes which had been abandoned upon his approach. Thinking that he had a sufficient clue to detect the thief, Mr. Hinton caused the sack and its contents to be exhibited in the neighborhood, and one of the villagers claimed the sack as his own, stating that he had loaned it to Aram, who boarded at his house. On this information Aram was dismissed, particularly as an examination of his locker at the school disclosed evidence of many petty thefts which had been going on over a long period of time.

In conducting his own defense during his trial for murder, Aram made a skillful attack on the fallibility of circumstantial evidence in general and the conclusions to be drawn from the discovery of human bones in particular, quoting several instances where bones had been found in caves and attempting to prove that the skeleton in St. Robert's cave was probably that of some hermit who had taken up his abode there.

There appears to be little doubt that Aram murdered Clarke, for he practically admitted it, yet no less an authority than Bulwer Lytton was of the opinion that he was guilty only of robbery. Aram was convicted principally on the evidence of his wife, who appears to have been a most peculiar person, for, after the execution of her husband, she not only continued to live at Knarborough but visited the forest every day and picked up the bones as they dropped, one by one, from her husband's body, while the children assisted in her support by taking strangers to view the tree where their father's remains had been hung.

Eating luncheon at a hotel coffee shop we were stunned when the waitress, at the end of the meal, deposited in front of us a cute little standing-up cigarette case, containing a dozen cigarettes or so.

"Those are pretty valuable souvenirs to leave around," we said. "Don't you have to put a chain on them?"

"Oh, no," replied the waitress brightly. "We just use our eyes."

Reason for Alteration

in Name of New Baby

On the very last day of the census, a baby was born at the Good Samaritan hospital and the proud father told the enumerator about it.

"And what is the baby's name?" asked the census taker, polishing his pencil.

"Why, it hasn't any name yet; it was born just about two hours ago."

"Can't very well list it without a name," protested the statistician.

"Well, I'd like to have it in the count to make Los Angeles a little bigger," said the husband, and he and the enumerator went into conference as to a suitable name. They finally decided on Henry, and the husband called up the hospital to get his wife's approval.

"She can't talk now," stated the nurse over the phone, "but she says if you've decided on Henry, it's all right with her, except that you'll have to make it Henrietta."—Los Angeles Times.

TOO MUCH CREAM FOR ONLY ONE TO USE

(By D. J. Walsh.)

MISS MARY SANDFORD awakened as usual at 6:30. Immediately there came the sound of a jingle and a slam from the back porch. With a leap she was out of bed, peeking through the curtains of her bedroom window. Down the back walk strode a handsome bareheaded young fellow in brown, swinging a metal carrier full of bottles. He was whistling softly an old tune, "My Mary's asleep."

She thrilled. Mary was not asleep. Nor could she again go to sleep that morning. She lay on her pillow thinking sweet, vague thoughts until Percy, the yellow cat which slept on the foot of her bed, jumped up and came to rub her cheek. Percy wanted his breakfast. She arose, dressed and went downstairs.

On the back porch she searched for the little note she had painstakingly written the night before. It was missing. He had taken it with him! It read: "My dear Mr. Twaddell, please leave one dollar's worth of cream tickets. Thank you. Mary Sandford." She had pinned the note to a dollar bill and inserted it in an empty milk bottle. Her cream tickets, printed on blue pasteboard, reposed under the second bottle. She had forgotten to tell him how much milk and cream to leave and he had left a quart of each. A quart of cream was a large order for a single lady. And it did not keep good in this weather. But, undoubtedly, Mrs. Gray could make use of it. As for Percy, he had already lapped so much cream that he was getting lazy. Mary herself had never cared much for it, it sort of went against her. And most certainly she could not afford to make such an excessive use of dairy products; it necessitated her cutting down on other things. Still, she would have sacrificed far more than she was sacrificing for the sake of putting joy into the milkman's voice on a gloomy morning.

Mrs. McIntosh was out taking in her milk as Mary tried to steal by on her way to Mrs. Gray's. Mrs. McIntosh was a widow, snapping-eyed, much younger than Mary and much better looking. Mary felt that she hated Mrs. McIntosh a little.

"Sakes alive," exclaimed the widow, eyeing the quart bottle of cream. "What you going to do with all that cream? You're getting extravagant in your old age."

"What about yourself?" retorted Mary, flushing. "You've got four quarts of Grade A milk there. And you are all alone."

"I'm going to do some baking," Mrs. McIntosh flushed in turn. She went into the house rather quickly. And Mary went down the alley to the shack out of which even at that early hour many boys of assorted sizes were spilling. They welcomed the cream with many joyful shouts. And Mary returned home feeling that she had begun the day well. There was, however, the painful consciousness that Mrs. McIntosh was also buying extensively of the handsome young milkman. And Mrs. McIntosh could afford to buy. She could take his entire truckload of dairy products if she chose. Her husband left her a forty-thousand-dollar life insurance.

Mary's breakfast did not taste awfully good. Neither did Percy's. He passed up his second saucer of milk. There would be a good pint left to turn into the sink.

That day it rained. The roof sprung a leak. Mary had to climb into the attic and put a couple of pans under the eaves to catch the trickle. She scratched her arm on a nail and had visions of blood poisoning. Would Percy—she understood that was his name—care if anything happened to her? She wept a little out of sympathy.

Not for worlds would Mary have admitted, even to Percy, the cat, that she was in love with a milkman. She had been brought up to have a higher ideal than that. Probably that was why she had not married. Middle age found her lonesome and alone, with enough to live on if she used it discreetly. It certainly wasn't discreet in her to buy such quantities of milk and cream.

All up and down the street women, some of them married, too!—were buying lots of milk. It wasn't that the milk was so much better than Mr. Ransome's, but it was peddled from a blue truck by a dashing young fellow who whistled a different tune at each house.

After dinner Mary made ready for a walk in the rain and went out to hunt up a carpenter. Milk or no milk, she had to have the roof fixed. She couldn't have it coming through on her neat wallpaper. On her way home she met Mrs. McIntosh going out to buy herself a new hat.

"Don't seem like this one looks as good on me as it ought," the widow said, preening herself for Mary's benefit. The hat she wore was lovely. Mary sighed.

A putty-colored roadster drew up beside the two women. A dark, laughing face looked out.

"Can't I take you ladies some place?" cried the milkman. But he was a milkman no longer, he was a millionaire, a fairy prince.

"You can take me to the Louise Hat Shoppe," said Mrs. McIntosh.

"Glad to. Step in, where do you want to go, Miss Sandford?"

"Home," murmured Mary dazedly.

He tucked them both into the roomy car. He beamed upon them. Mary's heart tightened.

"The longest way 'round," he laughed.

Slippery streets, rain coming down. But the car flew. Oh, Mary thought glancing at Mrs. McIntosh, if only she, too, had put on her best hat!

She had the longest ride. At her door he seemed to linger. Percy sat on the steps, washing his face.

"That your cat?"

"Yes," breathed Mary.

"That was all. But it was enough."

Next morning Mary found a little gift beside her bottle of cream—a gay-striped pencil slipped into a memorandum pad. But Mrs. McIntosh and all the rest found the same.

A week later Mary awakened much earlier than necessary. She lay waiting for the familiar sound of the jingling bottles. She had put out another dollar for cream tickets—and dear knows she could not afford them. For the roof had cost a lot.

She waited and waited. No milkman. She looked at the clock. Seven! And he hadn't come! Never before had he missed. She rose, dressed rapidly and ran downstairs.

No sign of him anywhere. Another half hour. Suspense, agony. Mrs. McIntosh came in.

"Where's our milk?"

"I wonder!"

"Maybe something has happened! Why! You are pale as a ghost!"

"So are you!"

"I guess I'll go into Mrs. Peek's. She's got a telephone. Maybe she has heard something."

"If you hear anything let me know," pleaded Mary.

She sat down and clasped her hands. She felt she knew what had happened. He drove so recklessly. Yes, something must have happened.

Mrs. McIntosh came back.

"Couldn't hear a thing. Well, old Ransome will be by pretty soon. We can get some milk of him."

But at nine o'clock the blue truck came tearing down the street. Out jumped a lean, red-headed youth who jingled the milk bottles impatiently and shouted "Milk!" Mary Sandford ran out.

"Sorry I'm late, lady! But I'm just learning the route," explained the red-headed youth.

"Learning the route? Where is Widy—Mr. Twaddell?"

"Sold out to me—threw up the business. Got married yesterday—left town for good. How much milk, lady?"

"A—pint," gasped Mary Sandford.

Want Scientific Study of Saint Kilda Island

Saint Kilda, the wave-battered islet, which is the outermost of the Hebrides off the western coast of Scotland, is to be abandoned forever by the dwindling remnant of its inhabitants, who will be moved to the mainland and provided with jobs by officials of the Scottish government. Meanwhile, British naturalists and medical men are insisting on a scientific study of many interesting points in the natural history of this remote island before the final evacuation destroys valuable data.

Saint Kilda is but two miles wide and three miles long. A century ago it supported nearly two hundred inhabitants. Now there are but thirty-six. During eight or nine months of the winter the gales of the North Atlantic ocean beat against the island's rocky shores so violently that it is impossible to land any kind of a boat. Until the advent of radio the inhabitants of Saint Kilda were completely out of touch with the world for more than half of each year.

Before the formulation of the germ theory of disease Saint Kilda provided a famous medical mystery. It was noted that immediately after the arrival of the first vessel in the spring virtually all the inhabitants of the island caught cold. During the winter's isolation, medical men now know most of the cold germs had died and the islanders had lost their immunity to this germ. The spring's first landing of persons from the outside world brought a new supply of these germs which the bodies of the islanders were unable to repel.

The partial isolation of the remote island has created many other unusual conditions and balances of life, naturalists maintain, which should be studied and recorded while the island is still inhabited.

The Secret

Nicola Tesla, at a dinner in New York, had explained one of his numerous inventions.

"You see how simple it is," he ended, "once it's explained. It's like the old minister's explanation of his long pastorate—a pastorate of forty years."

"You see," he said, "when I'd get mad and want to go, they wouldn't let me; and when they got mad and wanted me to go, I wouldn't go. We both never got mad at the same time."

Kurds, Good and Bad

A Kurd of the Turkey-Persia Border.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

THE Kurds, who have revolted along the Turkish-Persian border and against whom large Turkish forces have been operating near famous Mount Ararat, have been fighting periodically against the established states of Asia Minor for thousands of years. Always their favorite method of strife has been guerrilla warfare. They have been historic marauders, but perhaps they have every reason, so far as environment is concerned, to lead such lives. State after state has struck against them with forces more powerful than any they could raise.

The days of Assyrian power in Mesopotamia seem pretty far back toward the beginnings of history. Records of that empire show that time and again its soldiers were sent into the rough country around the headwaters of the great rivers to subdue the mountaineers—ancestors of the Kurds—who harried Assyria's outlying settlements. These same mountaineers fought the Armenians when the latter came into the region between 1,000 and 600 B. C.

When Xenophon retreated from Asia Minor in 401 B. C. the Kurds (then called the Carduchi) attacked his 10,000 Greeks, rolling great stones down on them from cliffs and mountains. They fought continually against the Bagdad caliphs. Since the Turks rose to power in Asia Minor the Kurds have fought them repeatedly; in fact, the Turks never established any considerable measure of control over these fierce, freedom-loving highlanders.

Since the World War the European territory of Turkey has been negligible. The country has consisted almost solely of the big, fat peninsula lying between the Black sea on the north and the eastern arm of the Mediterranean on the south, and an extension to the east about as broad as the Asia Minor peninsula, reaching roughly half way from the Black sea to the Caspian. The southern half of this eastern extension—the southeastern corner of postwar Turkey—is what is loosely called Kurdistan. The other half of the eastern extension, immediately north of Kurdistan, was once Turkish Armenia.

Kurdish Sphere Is Large.

Now that tens of thousands of the Armenian residents have been driven across the Russian border, while other tens of thousands have perished, the region hardly deserves the old name. The Kurdish population was always high in Turkish Armenia; now it is proportionately much greater. The whole eastern end of present Turkey, constituting almost a third of the territory of the country, therefore, may roughly be considered the Kurdish sphere of influence. It is in the northeast corner of Turkey that the Kurds have recently been most active.

Geographic and political and economic complications aplenty are found in this region. On the east Kurdistan touches Persia, and the people for a considerable distance into that country are Kurds, too. Indeed, Kurdish people inhabit the entire Zagros mountain range which extends from Turkey for 600 miles to the southeast, forming the boundary between Persia and Iraq.

The Kurds belong to the Iranian branch of the white race. Because of the open-air lives which they live, most of them have harsh features. The great majority are nominally Mohammedans.

The plateau region lying partly in old Armenia, partly in Kurdistan, where many of the most warlike Kurds live, presents a good example of the effects on man of a mixture of rugged uplands and fertile valleys. Limestone mountains and recently extinct volcanoes occupy the upper levels. Lower are magnificent canyons cut by the Tigris and Euphrates headstreams, and numerous broad, basin-shaped valleys whose floors are fertile plains. The ancestors of the Kurds were ousted from many of these desirable lowlands by the Armenian invasion and from others by the later arriving Turks.

Some Recent Revolts.

Even the fairly recent regime of Kemal Pasha has had several Kurdish revolts on its hands. There was a sporadic uprising in 1920; and in 1925 the tribesmen made an unsuccessful effort to set up their own government. The scrapping of the caliphate at Constantinople aroused them and nearly every change in old Moslem customs has irritated them. Revolt after revolt has been quelled but as soon as the Kurd replenishes his forces and supplies, he is ready to attack again.

The Kurd farmers of the Iraq plains are more prosperous than the tribesmen of the hill country. Travelers climb the trails of Kurdistan for miles without seeing a village. When one does appear, it is usually situated in a well protected spot. Houses are placed without regard to building line and a bird's-eye view of a village reveals a jumble of mud and stone structures.

The peasant's house is a one-room structure which might be mistaken for a stable. The tribesmen reserve one side of his abode for his animals while his family occupies the other side. Kurds sit on the floor when they rest or eat, therefore they do not need tables or chairs.

The tribal chief or headman fares better. He has a house for his family and a guest house where he lives and entertains guests. He is offended if a traveler does not stay with him. Once the traveler has stopped, he must remain for dinner. The food is placed on the floor in the center of the diners. Should a guest stretch his legs toward another person, convey food to his mouth with his left hand, or fondle the dog, his host is offended. No knives and forks are to be found in the Kurd silver chest but if a guest has difficulty in feeding himself with his hands, a spoon will be handed to him. Few meals are served that do not include mast (curdled milk) the favorite dish of the Kurd. A little water mixed with the mast makes mastao, the Kurd "national" drink. The tribesmen like vegetables but seldom serve meat.

They Buy Their Wives.

Under Moslem law, the Kurd may take four wives. Wives are bought, so the peasant usually has only one. The chiefs take the full quota. Wives are priced according to their rank. The tribesman can get a wife in exchange for a pony or goat, or one may cost the equivalent of $2,500. The wedding entails a season of merry-making in which the whole tribe joins, but it takes less than a minute to dissolve a union. The man simply says "I divorce you" three times and the parties are free.

To the foreigner, the Kurds seem to know little else than the "art" of highway robbery. Many of the mountain tribesmen are adept thieves, but in the hills as well as the plains, many Kurds earn honest livings by farming and cattle raising. Kurds are pastoral people, seldom moving from their villages except to migrate to higher altitudes during the summer for new pasturage.

In spite of exciting events in the fighting history of the Kurds, the tribesmen were almost unknown outside the Near East before the World War. When a delegation of Kurds appeared at the peace conferences in 1919 newspaper men did not know who the sunburnt tribesmen might be. When their identity was revealed the Kurds went on the front pages and frequently have been there since.

The presence of Kurds in the Mosul region of what is now northern Iraq was a hard diplomatic problem for the treaty drafters to solve after the World War. Except in Mosul City, the population of this region is almost solidly Kurdish. It is the odor and power of petroleum that in some ways dominate all else in this region. What promises to become one of the major oil fields of the world centers about Mosul.

Naturalist Will Study Creatures of the Sea

Dr. William Beebe, a famous naturalist, has gone to Nonesuch Island, Bermuda, to study the strange creatures that live in the sea. He is to live with them, but will pursue his studies in a special under water apparatus fitted with thick glass windows. Doctor Beebe hopes to reach a depth of nearly 1,700 feet and to discover many new kinds of marine life. The ordinary diving apparatus consists of a helmet with glass "eyes" secured to a waterproof dress which covers the whole body except the hands, a flexible tube connected with a pump which provides air, a 40-pound weight for the chest, a similar weight for the back, boots soled with 16 pounds of lead, and a life-line, in which in most cases telephone wires are embedded. A diving suit of metal is used by divers when they work at great depths.
